I've been selected as a finalist in the National Portrait Prize 2012!! The image of Ned who I photographed last year has been selected as a finalist for the $25,000 prize and is currently exhibiting at the National Portrait Gallery in Canberra.

The exhibition opening in Canberra was amazing and it truly struck me how powerful photographic portraiture is and how important it is to record our lives in this day and age. Future generations will be able to see how we lived and what we did, long after we are all gone. Despite not winning first prize, being one of 46 finalists from 1500 entries (top 3% in Australia) who made it this far is by far the biggest achievement of my career to date.
